Gospel Reflection

Readings: Rom 11:25-36 and Mt 28:16-20

The mystery of the Trinity, which the Old Testament obscurely signifies, is in the new Testament declared; and it is this: that the God of all, who is revealed in the Old Testament, is the Father of a Son from everlasting, called also His Word and Image, of His substance and partaker of all His perfections, and equal to Himself, yet without being separate from Him, but one with Him; and that from the Father and the Son proceeds eternally the Holy Spirit, who also is of one substance, Divinity, and majesty with Father and Son. Moreover we learn that the Son or Word is a person – that is, is to be spoken of as “He,” not “it,” and can be addressed; and that the Holy Spirit also is a Person. Thus God subsists in Three Persons, from everlasting; first, God is the Father, next God is the Son, next God is the Holy Spirit; and the Father is not the Son, nor the Son the Holy Spirit, nor the Holy Spirit the Father. And God is Each of these Three, and nothing else; that is, He is either the Father, or the Son, or the Holy Spirit. Moreover, God is as wholly and entirely God in the Person of the Father, as though there were no Son and Spirit; as entirely in that of the Son, as though there were no Spirit and Father; as entirely in that of the Spirit, as though there were no Father and Son. And the Father is God, the Son God, and the Holy Spirit God, while there is but one God; and that without any inequality, because there is but One God, and He is without parts or degrees; though how it is that that same Adorable Essence, indivisible, and numerically One, should subsist perfectly and wholly in Each of Three Persons, no words of man can explain, nor earthly illustration typify.

Father's Day – Week of Masses (from Saturday, June 19th, to Friday, June 25th)

Prayer for Fatherhood

Heavenly Father, You have fashioned us all in Your image and likeness, and call each one of us by a particular call to a more intimate communion with You. Your particular vocation for me is to reach You, Father, by being a father myself. Grant me the graces first to realize in all the details of my life that I am called to image You in this way. And preserve me next from actions and words that might cause my children to think less of their Heavenly Father because of the errors of their earthly one.

I ask all this through the intercession of St. Joseph, patron of all fathers. Amen.

Job well done ladies and gentlemen. You are the back bones of this Parish. Your hospitality and smiles attract people to our church. Keep the good work up to honor the Blessed Mother. Thanks from Linda & Rita to the kitchen workers and from Carol for all the workers in the hall, bar entrance, and clean-up crew. A special thank you goes to our new helper Morgan Harris and to all those who stepped in at the last minute to help out.

Maronites! Who Are They?

Maronites = Catholics of the East; Latins = Catholics of the West. We are all Catholics.
Anointing of the Sick (1)

The Catholic of the West have called the Sacrament of the Anointing of the Sick "Extreme Unction" and thought of it as the sacrament of the dying and, thus, it became a frightening thing for both the sick person and his or her relatives. Consequently, the priest was not called (when they dared to call him) until the last moments of the sick person's life. The Maronites called this sacrament "Anointing of the Sick" (Mash Hat Al-Marda).

When Vatican II decided to bring new changes to the name, rite and understanding of this sacrament, the Maronite appellation was chosen for the Universal Catholic Church.

The Constitution on the Sacred Liturgy declared: "Extreme Unction" which may also and more fittingly be called "Anointing of the Sick," is not a sacrament for those only who are at the point of death. Hence, as soon as any one of the faithful begins to be in danger of death from sickness or old age, the appropriate time for him to receive this sacrament has certainly already arrived."

It stated also that, "The sick person is anointed after he/she has made his/her confession and before he/she receives Viaticum." Finally, it recommended the revision of the rite of anointing "so as to correspond with the varying conditions of the sick who receive the sacrament." Pope Paul VI declared: "those who are dangerously ill" should be anointed. Examples:

- Peoples who are going to have major surgery,
- Sick children may be anointed "if they have sufficient use of reason to be comforted by this sacrament."
- Retarded persons may be anointed if they have reached at least the imperfect use of reason,
- Elderly people, because of their infirm or weakened condition, may receive this sacrament even though there is no evident sign of dangerous illness.
- Unconscious persons, who are in serious condition because of illness or accident, may be anointed if the priest judges that they would have asked for it if they were conscious. But if the person is certainly dead, he or she cannot be anointed.

The priest anoints these peoples with holy oil in the form of a cross on the forehead saying appropriate prayers while anointing.

Story: Abortion

An excerpt from A Murder of Innocents

Darkness. Utter darkness. The thundering cadence of a heartbeat resounds through aquatic sloshing. Warm fluid passes rhythmically in-and-out of lungs, but it doesn't suffocate. Not long ago the tiny enclosure seemed as big as the universe, but now there's barely enough room to twist a smidgen. A restrictive belt attached to (lie waist is secured to the rubbery wall. Off in the distance, intermittently between the rapid pounding, the syncopations of a second beat slows down.

"Mommy must be taking a nap. She needs her rest, you know. I love her and she loves me. I can't wait to meet her. It won't be long now. I'm getting pretty big for this place. At first I never wanted to leave the safety and warmth of my mommy; I thought I'd be satisfied listening to her muffled voice and laughter – I can recognize her voice anywhere – now I want to see her face. And lately it's been getting a little cramped in here. It won't be long now."

The liquid atmosphere drains out; the tiny chamber collapses. "What's going on? This never happened before. But I don't sense any fear from my mommy so this must be a good thing. I could use a little more time though, maybe four more weeks. My lungs need more time to develop, and my ears aren't quite ready yet. But mother knows best. I love her and I really hope she loves me."

Cold metal tongs invade the sanctuary and slip along the legs and torso. They jam into the soft ribs and snap closed, pinching the fatty skin.

"Hey! Watch it, that's gonna leave a mark. I may be little, but I have feelings too. When my mom finds out you hurt me she's going to be really mad. She loves me you know, and I love her too. You don't need to force me out. If the fluid didn't drain out, I would have flipped over on my head the way God designed me to in a week or so. But maybe my mommy couldn't wait to see me. I know I can't wait to see her."

The slippery metal tongs thrust in again and clamp down on the section of his left leg just below the knee. Searing pain explodes. The tiny leg frantically recoils, desperately kicking the collapsing chamber.

"Let go of me! You're hurting me! Stop pulling, don't you think I want out? I've got big plans you know. God has tucked away in my brain the cure for cancer. All I need is a chance, and I'm going to make my mommy proud. I love her so very much."

A sliding rush and both legs break out. The first sensation of air flutters over moist skin. The forceps relinquish their death grip; two latex-clad hands grasp the legs and pull.

"Wow, that breeze feels funny and a bit chilly I must say. I've never felt air before but I kinda like it. Yeah, I could get used to this."

Powerful hands pull against the torso; the entire body is exposed and wiggling, all except the head. A deep bruise is already forming where the forceps had crushed the fragile limb.

"Icy, don't stop now, I'm just about free. The air blowing over my wet body is getting pretty cold now. If you'd let go I'm sure I could squirm my way out. I'm only a few inches from seeing my mommy. I've waited such a long time to see her. Please, won't you let me go so I can see my beautiful mother? I like a good joke as much as the next guy, but enough is enough already. I've waited over eight months to feel the touch of her cheek against mine. I want to snuggle in her loving embrace. It's awfully dark in here, and I'm ready to see the light."

Sharp scissors puncture the base of the skull. A stream of dark crimson blood gurgles out of the wound. The arms and legs stiffen and wince from the pain. The tiny mouth opens in the birthing canal and expels a silent scream loud enough to shake the foundations of heaven. Somehow the will to live overcomes the pain and a final wiggle brings freedom. A rush of oxygen touches the face, and an agonizing cry fills the room. "Somebody help me! I can't take the pain! Will somebody stop the pain!"

Unfocused eyes latch onto a nurse. "Are you my mommy? Will you kiss it and make it better? I'm feeling weak and cold and the pail..."

The nurse hands the baby to the doctor, and for a split second the baby looks directly into his eyes. "Now I'll be all right, I'm in the hands of a healer. I don't know what the poke in the head was about, but I'm sure he can fix it. All those years of study to save lives and the oath to first do no harm. I know he can stop the bleeding. My little wound shouldn't be hard to fix. I want to look my best when I meet my mommy for the first time. I love her so very much, and I want her to love me. But I'm feeling very cold; my vision is growing dim. Doc, maybe you should do something kinda fast. I can feel my life fading. Put those healing hands to work!" The doctor looks away, grabs the baby by the forehead, and snaps the tiny neck.

The crying stops.

Dr. Gaston bolts upright in bed, drenched in sweat. His chest heaves; his pulse races out of control. He glances over at the large red numbers on the nightstand: 2:49 a.m. "It was only a dream, a nightmare," Gaston said out loud to chase the demons away. "Third time this week. Thank goodness it was only a dream ... or was it'?"

Joke (001)

Religion

"What do you do for a living?" asked a lady of a young man at a cocktail party.

"I am a paratrooper."

"It must be awful to be a parachute jumper," said the lady. "Well, it does have its scary moments."

"Tell me about your most terrible experience."

"Well," said the paratrooper, "I think it was the time when I came down on a lawn where there was a sign read, KEEP OFF THE GRASS."

Love

A man offered to pay a sum of money to his twelve-year-old daughter if she mowed the lawn. The girl went at the task with great zest and by evening the whole lawn had been beautifully mowed well, everything except a large uncut patch of grass in one corner.

When the man said he couldn't pay the sum agreed upon because the whole lawn hadn't been mowed, the girl said she was ready to forego the money, but would not cut the grass in the patch.

Curious to find out why, he checked the uncut patch. There, right in the center of the patch, sat a large toad. The girl had been too tender-hearted to run over it with the lawnmower.

Grace

A devout religious man fell on hard times. So he took to praying in the following fashion: "Lord, remember all the years I served You as best I could, asking for nothing in return. Now that I am old and bankrupt I am going to ask for a favor for the first time in my life and I am sure You will not say no: allow me to win the lottery."

Days passed. Then weeks and months. But nothing happened. Finally, almost driven to despair, he cried out one night, "Why don't You give me a break, God?" He suddenly heard the voice of God replying, "Give me a break yourself! Why don't you buy a lottery ticket?"

Religion

Goldstein, aged ninety-two, had lived through pogroms in Poland, concentration camps in Germany and dozens of other persecutions against Jews.

"Oh, Lord," he said, "Isn't it true that we are Your chosen people?"

A heavenly voice replied, "Yes, GOLDSTEIN, the Jews are My chosen people."

"Well, then, isn't it time You chose somebody else?"

Spirituality: God Is Love

God's love is miraculous as a newborn brought into the world.
God's love is more fulfilling than a Thanksgiving dinner.
God's love is nurturing as a mother holding her child in her arms.
God's love is satisfying as a big smile from a loved one.
God's love is bigger than the blessed Earth and beyond.
God's love is beyond any love you could imagine.
God's love is blessed as someone sick that is brought back to health.
God's love is strong as the Spirit given, that lives within us.
God's love is more wonderful than all of nature's beauties.
God's love is as beautiful as the image that He made us.
God's love is imagery greater than the greatest artist in creation.
God's love is great as the healing Jesus that He sent us.
God's love is more healing than the world's most helpful medicine.
God's love is helpful as a pure heart.
God's love is pure, as it was given out of pure love.
And pure love we give back as strong as the souls that he gave us.
Thank You O Lord for this amazing love that you give us.

Prayers: For Those Who Live Alone

I live alone, dear Lord, stay by my side; in all my daily needs be You my guide.
Grant me good health, for that indeed, I pray; to carry on my work from day to day.
Keep pure my mind, my thoughts, my every deed; let me be kind, unselfish in my neighbor's need.
Spare me from fire, from flood, malicious tongues; from thieves, from fear, and evil ones.
If sickness or an accident befall; then humbly, Lord, hear You my call.
And when I'm feeling low, or in despair; lift up my heart and help me in my prayer.
I live alone, dear Lord, yet have no fear; because I feel Your presence ever near.
